THE DOVE ST. MARY'S COLLEGE OF MARYLAND

T H E

Wonder

Y - E - A - R - S

1995
1996
1997
1998

Welcome to the

It's not quite the same as sitting on a real beach, but it will do for Michelle, Abby, Emily, and Dominique in the middle of the winter in Washington, DC.

Volleyball is just one of the many sports that are played around campus when the weather is agreeable. You would be surprised at how much athletic ability St. Mary's students have when it comes to not going to class.

Wonder Years

Horsing around is one the few rules they tell you to obey when using the waterfront facilities. Students, even in college, still seem to have a hard time understanding rules when there is fun involved.

Students around the country gathered around their televisions to watch Kevin, Winnie, and Paul grow from small neighborhood children into young adults, and finally into mature human beings during The Wonder Years marathon this year. We felt close to their characters. We were living their lives, just three decades later.

We dedicate this yearbook to the Class of 1998 thinking back to when Paul, Winnie, and Kevin ended their lives of being students. Like them, we will continue to become adults living our lives to the fullest. We hope this collection of memories will allow you to remember these days in the same way that Kevin Arnold remembers his.

After three years, you would think that moving in would be as easy as tying your shoes. No matter how many time you do it, getting settled will always be a major pain in the butt.

Sunsets don't get any prettier than those that we see here over our own waterfront. Is there any better way to end the day than to watch the sun set in our gorgeous orange skies in the springtime?

Did you ever wonder what it would be like to go to school in the sixties. Who would you have been... Kevin, Winnie, Paul, Wayne (the bully brother) or the hippy sister? Well, I guess it really doesn't matter because you are here now, and that's what matters. The kids of The Wonder Years lived their lives the same way we did when we were their age. Go to school, come home, watch television, have crushes, get into fights. Why is it that we are so fascinated with their stories and not of our own. Well, our job here is to tell the story of the lives here at St. Mary's. Maybe one day, someone will make a TV show about St. Mary's Student Life. Yeah, right. Screech doesn't go here.

While You're Here

Wildlife has become a natural part of our lives here on campus. It is hard to walk anywhere without seeing some sort of animal along the way. Too bad they can't all be as quiet as these ducks.

One thing is for sure about combining the beautiful sunshine and the relaxing waterfront ... it can be quite blinding. You know it's spring when the shades come out of their pouches.

Midnight Playground

Freshman take a midnight break during their first semester because it is way to early to have a nervoud breakdown. Games such as Pictionary are great stress relievers, especially when you get free food at the same time.

Student Development always comes up with the best programs to give students a break from their everyday normal routines. Midnight Playground, under the direction of sophomore Bridgette Gallagher (far right), provided food, fun, and most importantly, a stress free atmosphere. Students came and painted, colored, listened to music, and jumped in the Moon Bounce.

The Office of Student Development and their incredible staff of students work long hours to make the lives of the students here at St. Mary's the most enjoyable they can be. Show them your appreciation by attending the programs that they work so hard to provide.

It appears that some students are having a little more trouble than others relieving the tension. Junior Sheila Renehan can't seem to have any fun bouncing on the moon.

Midnight Playground

Frisbee tossing has become the most popular non-academic studying around campus. Students here personalize their own so they can pick up their own out of the pond.

It doesn't matter how old you are, just as long as you stay between the lines. Coloring will always be a passtime for girls of all ages.

Biology in Belize

While most students use Spring Break to get away from the stresses and anxieties of classes, a group of Biology students and their professors traveled to Belize for ten days to perform group designed experiments. Prior to leaving, many of the students completed a SCUBA certification course which was needed if their projects required deep diving.

After arriving in Belize on two planes, the group of 14 students, 2 professors -- Walter Hatch and Chris Tanner -- and 2 TAs, took a charter plane to Dangrego Island. It was here at the Glovers Reef Marine Reserve and Research Station where all the experiments were carried out.

Most of the projects were under the subject of Tropical Marine Biology. Students and their groups spent a various number of hours per day experimenting to find out that many things didn't work the way they thought they would. The first couple of days that they were there was pure work, conducting experiments and studying for a quiz at the end of the week. However, at the end of that week, or whenever else they felt they needed some relief, these intense Bio students found relaxation in a game of beach volleyball, a cool trip to the local underwater coral, or a refreshing drink from a freshly shucked coconut.

Biology and other course trips such as these may become an annual spring break for students who wish to further advance their studies with hands on experience in fabulous locations around the world. Keep your eyes and ears open for future opportunities.

Glovers Creek and Marine Reserve and Research Station became the home for fourteen college students during Spring Break. Although it's work, it still beats sitting in a classroom.

Christine Valentine takes time out from here busy day to show of a fish that lives in those faraway waters. It's not everyday you see a fish like that swimming in the St. Mary's River.

Unlike any of the housing on St. Mary's campus, or off for that matter, this beach bungalow drops you right off into the sand. The only sand we have is when the townhouse pond is all dried up.

Biology in Belize

Volleyball was one of the projects that all the students didn't seem to mind participating in. After hours of hard work, hard corps fun was the one thing everyone craved.

Biology students Rob Mitchell, Jon Champion, and Drew Weaver relax the night away on the steps of their home away from home. Or, they needed some time away from all those girls.

Biology in Belize

Climate conditions changed as fast as you could walk from one place to another. In the town it seemed dry and dusty. Just around the corner, however, Rob, Diana, Corey, and Abby are wearing sweatpants as they tromp through the wet and humid jungle.

Midnight Breakfast

Apparently, whip cream was on the Midnight Breakfast menu for a reason. SGA Treasurer Andrew Mosley got a mouthful and was generous enough to let the students take this opportunity to laugh at his misfortune.

Joanne Goldwater definately needs to get out of her office a little more often. From the way she is dancing around Woods in the middle of the night would leave me to believe that she is a night owl.

Midnight Breakfast

Towards the end of each semester, students can look forward to Midnight Breakfast, a time when they can come out in the middle of the night and be as crazy as they want to be, well, to a point. Members of the Residence Life staff including Joanne Goldwater and Idonas Hughes, join the forces of the cafeteria staff to serve the students. Midnight Breakfast is probably one of the best meals that comes out of that kitchen...ham, pancakes, bacon, and for those that are actually doing some studying, all the coffee you can manage to drink during the time that you are there. Although Midnight Breakfast is supposed to be a study break, the chances that everyone is studying are quite slim.

Don't look so excited Idonas. He must not realize that the year is almost over and soon he will have the great job of lining up students for housing for the upcoming year. All he knows is that he had to stand here for two hours while crazy kids come and tear up the place.

World Carnival

As spring draws near, the Student Development administrative staff and Event Coordinates can be seen running around campus preparing for the biggest events of the year...Lil' Palooza and World Carnival. Beginning Friday night, campus as well as local bands play until well into the darkness of the night. Early the next morning, volunteers set up the waterfront for vendors and school clubs so that they might provide our students with a cultural array of food, information, and memorabilia. Each year, there is a contest for the best T-shirt design which are sold throughout the day, as well as many other products being sold by various clubs and organizations in hopes that World Carnival will bring out the generosity in people.

Well, it's not the Berlin Wall, but to many it is a obstacle worth fighting. Throughout the day, several students tried with all their might to reach the top of the Mighty Wall. This climber has quite a ways to go before he reaches the top.

Lil' Palooza

Relaxing by the waterfront while listening to the music of local and on-campus bands is one plus for St. Mary's. Not many schools have the resources and ability to provide such a nostalgic atmosphere for their students. Such a characteristic makes St. Mary's appealing to many students.

Block Rock '98

For the first time in the history of the Dove Yearbook, this organization, with help from the Coffeehouse, put on a rock concert like no other. Block Rock '98, was held by the waterfront the weekend following World Carnival. That alone meant it would have to be good to be remembered. However, with the bands that were lined up to sing there was no doubting that this show would be a success. Starting the night off were the King Bennies, a campus band with lead singer Kevin Norris. Their sounds brought students out of the woodwork. The following bands were Underfoot, The Kelly Bell Band with the blues, and headlining the show was The Laughing Colors. Seeing this band several times throughout Maryland, made their singing here a semester long dream become a reality.

Members of Laughing Colors take a minute after their set to have a picture taken with the organizers of Block Rock. Dave, Corey, Dan, and Will are a great bunch of guys.

Kelly Bell gave St. Mary's quite a show as he sang the blues. If you caught them that day, look for their CD now available. It's well worth it.

Block Rock '98

Kevin Norris sings his heart out on a spectacular Friday afternoon as his close friends (top) cheer him on.

Block Rock '98

Audience members seem enthralled by the band that is currently playing. Or it might have to do with whatever is in that closed container.

Guitar playing takes some people to another world. The guitar player for The Kelly Bell Band looks like he is flying away to another planet. Come back. Come back.

Senior Donnie Baumer lays down the beat for the King Bennies. After a year of practice and a debut at The Atomic Outpost, the King Bennies finally make it big on the waterfront of St. Mary's. They also appeared on the T-shirt that commemorated the event. What more could they ask for?

Laughing Colors

are made up of basist Dan Welsch, guitarist Corey Hall, acoustic quitarist and lead singer Dave Tieff, and drummer Will Dorsey, Jr. (not pictured). They currently have four albums out which are available everywhere. They can be seen up and down the east coast. These four guys put on a terrific show wherever they are, including St. Mary's. Go see them.

Constructing

A New Kent Hall

As you walked around campus this past semester, you could not help but notice that St. Mary's is constantly changing, and for once we don't mean just the students. Construction has begun on Kent Hall, to transform it into a building for offices as well as classrooms. No longer will professors be stuck in the basement of Calvert. They will have offices with fews and no bars. Opening sometime during the Fall '98 for professors, studentss will begin having classes in this building come Spring '99.

Kent Hall is not the only building receiving reconstructive surgery. Plans for a new Charles Hall have been reviewed, revised, and reported on in all aspects. Construction is said to begin once school has been let out and will continue until January of 2000.

Many issues have been brought up concerning construction including the effect it has on the physical appearance of the school. All that can be said is that this is all temporary and in the end, it will all be worth it.

Senior Galla

Senior Galla

Your senior year is what every student works for throughout college and once you have made it, you want to be rewarded, besides graduation. Each year, officers of the senior class, in conjunction with the administrative staff plan the Senior Galla, a formal gathering during the week prior to graduation. During senior week, students are able to let their hair down and celebrate being finished, but it is the Senior Galla along with graduation that really imbeds the fact that you are finished with school into you mind.

Graduating Seniors Jessie Lawson and Clayton Ahrens enjoy each others company during the annual Galla. Switching to a formal mode is sometimes difficult for students, but at this point during their college career, I believe that students will put a tie on with no trouble.

Maryland Day

Docked together, The Arc and The Dove make for a great picture. It is not very often that you see these two whips together.

Juniors Lisa Carlson and Beth Washington take this opportunity to walk the paths around Historic St. Mary's City.

Not many colleges have the advantage of being located in the heart of a historic city. St. Mary's City, each year, sponsors Maryland Day, a celebration of its founding. Historic St. Mary's City is opened up to the public and special events happen throughout the day. The most interesting is the sailing of the Dove, which is docked along the south shore of campus. Cannon fire can be heard and great tasting foods can be smelled from anywhere on campus. All the building can be toured and the gift shop is open for souvenirs.

Spring Break

Travelling in groups always makes a trip interesting. Large groups travelled to Key West. Camp sites were packed with just St. Mary's students.

Juniors Bryant Porter and Steve Schmidt relax on the beach outside of their resort. They look like they could stay here for the rest of their lives. Who wouldn't?

South of the (bottom right) Border was just one of the many stops made by students who travelled to the Keys via car. With signs beginning in Virginia, it is quite difficult to drive by and stop.

In Key West

While many students travelling to Key West chose to stay in tents for the week, there were some who chose to do Spring Break a little more civilized.

Beaches in Key West were quite different than the beaches at our own waterfront. Swimming in this water was actually an option, without getting your feet cut up.

Could this student be suffering from some sort of cabin fever? Junior Brian King was getting ready for Halloween while trying to relieve some stress at the same time.

Are you a people

Springbreak is probably the one time of year that everyone looks forward to. Students pack up and speak out across the United States to different tourist traps. These four girls seem to be having a great time trapped down in the Bahamas.

Travelling is a common summertime plan for students. Alum Dave Sherwood and Dominique Monie visit Mount Rushmore on there long drive back to school.

Midnight playground was only one of the many activities provided to students. This freshman finds coloring a rather relaxing passtime. That would explain the ten coloring books I have in my room.

person?

Kevin Arnold's relationships between him and his family and friends were the most important thing to him while he was growing up. I believe that students here at St. Mary's would have to say the same thing. Friendships from the very beginning often last through all four years of tramatic college life. These bonds are those that can never be broken. They can be tested and tried but will remain in tact through thick and thin. Look at Kevin and Winnie, or Kevin and Paul. For awhile, it looked like they may never talk again, but the bond they held with each other was too strong to break. There are many Kevins, Winnies, and Pauls around. Who do you share this bond with.

Well, it looks as if Steve and Christian weren't expecting the camera to come into the bathroom with them. Some people might wonder what was going on in there, but it is obvious that they are shaving their entire bodies. Does that clear everything up for you?

BON VOYAGE

CLASS OF 1998!

Candy Woodie

Jessica Deutchman glances back to smile at the those she is leaving behind. It won't be long before she says good-bye to St. Mary's for good. Although graduating should seem like a joyful time, it is sometimes one of the saddest moments in a person's life.

Hey Everybody, What's up?

We realize that we are unable to include everyone in the yearbook. Therefore, we would like to free up a few pages of the book so that you can include those that you would like to see. We wish that we had the opportunity to obtain a pictures of all the students, but that would be virtually impossible to do. Please take advantage of this opportunity so that in the future, you can look back through this book and see the faces of those people you knew. A yearbook is meant to capture the memories that may be forgotten in the future. Keep hold of these Wonder Years so that they will always remain a part of your life. Remember, a picture is worth a thousand words. Don't you wish you could hand in pictures instead of papers?

Sincerely,

The Dove Staff

Living On The

Old townhouses (facing top) were the first breath of reality that St. Mary's students took when they were first built. Surrounding the Greens, the six sets face each other, and are conveniently located near the upper classmen birthday pond.

New townhouses (facing bottom) are divided into the Northern Crescent and Southern Crescent. Encircling the field and the track, back porches provide a great view of fall and spring sports games.

Junior Allie Beach takes a moment inside her house to relax. Despite more personal space which is a great plus of the townhouses, students are quite often stressed out and require some much needed down time, wherever it may happen.

Townhouse Greens

Just when you said you would never live with another person of the same sex ever again, you decide to move into a townhouse, where you will be living with three of them. No matter. Finally moving into a townhouse is an achievement in and of itself. There's nothing like coming home to real food, a real bathroom, and a real life. Dorms are great when you are first getting started, but come on, after two or three years of sharing a bathroom with twenty other people, it's about time you had the opportunity to shower in privacy. I don't know whether or not everyone was like me, but I remember moving in to those little jail cells and realizing there was no way I was going to fit all of the junk that I brought into that little room. Townhouses solved that problem with one turn of the key. Space galore. Moving to the townhouses has one disadvantage, especially if you are a History or Economics Major... Anne Arundel Hall is on the other side of the universe. Oh well townhouses are definately the place to live.

Sailing has become a popular characteristic of St. Mary's. With the Governor's Cup Race ending here at our waterfront, it's no surprise that sailors from all over the country connect this loved sport with this loved school.

Women here at St. Mary's don't enjoy having others invading their territory. Trisha Kilroy and Erica Pearson do their best at protecting their home court.

Although this season was not as successful as the previous season, Coach Brewer and his flock of Seahawks proved that they still had that fighting spirit. It may not be that obvious by looking at the statistics, but these girls are definately dedicated team players. Arriving two weeks earlier than everybody else, the field hockey team gets a head start on their season. As they say, "Practice makes perfect." And if not, it makes a well-oiled machine. The team was young, with only two seniors and two juniors. Freshman

There is something about St. Mary's that makes the average person automatically think sailing. Why is that? Could it be the surrounding water, or the fact that we enroll some of the nation's top sailors. Our sailing program, both the dingy and off-shore team have performed extremely well in regattas all over the country. In the past, we have had sailors go on to com-

Women can play any sport just as well as a man and these girls definately prove this. With a season of winning almost three-quarters of their games, this group of young ladies strutted their stuff up and down the basketball courts of the east coast.

Scoring a total of 1724 points over the course of the season, they left their opponents in the dust with

The beginning of women's lacrosse several years ago brought skepticism to many sports fans. Nevertheless, girls all over the world have shown their fans that girls can play lacrosse. Okay, so it's not exactly like watching guys beat each other up, but it is still quite exhilarating, and out ladies know how to get the job done. Compared to their opponents, who

The seahawks really tore up the lacrosse fields this season. With a team full of high scorers and outstanding goalkeepers, it was quite difficult for any team to get a winning edge on our team. Winning two-thirds of this season's games, our guys brought pride and joy back to the field.

This season's team was loaded with offense up and down the field. However, our defense was kicking with Tom Newberry and Jim Haske tending the goal

The tennis teams rocked the courts in 1998. Both the boys and the girls had winning seasons. SCA

Medieval reenactments are a major part of this organized club. Students for Creative Anacronism can be seen around campus on certain Tuesdays dressed in their old-time clothes and carrying weapons that were used during that time period.

SCA

The SMC Men bring lots of laughter as they prance around the stage in their short skirts and hairy legs. The male viewers are always impressed with this courageous attempt of total humiliation.

Soloist senior Eric Olsen stands front and center as he sings Bruce Springstein's "The Streets of Philadelphia". This number became quite popular with the ladies watching him. We wonder why?

SMC Men

“Bubba” is his name and singing is his game.

Senior Brian Tenney tries as hard as he can to make himself look like a Spice Girl. For some reason, I don't think he would be able to pass for one. Although his hair is pretty Scary.

For several years now, the SMC Men have been entertaining our students with their comic relief and musical talent. From Hootie and the Blowfish and “Eat My Spam” to a dramatic interpretation of Chumbawumba and “I Get Knocked Down”, this all male acopella group manages to keep their audience in stitches from the moment they step on stage until the moment they leave, for a second time. Due to their increasing popularity, the group decided to gather recordings of their favorite songs over the years and produce a tape, “Planting the Seed”. Appropriate name. Performing each semester right around finals time, the SMC Men provide several hours of total relaxation for everyone.

SMC Men

Queen Anne residents decided to bring in their own protection. This little guy was sometimes found wandering the halls making sure that all was okay. He always left with a little more than what he came in with.

Campus Wide

Sunrises most often go unnoticed unless you are an early riser. As it gets lighter earlier and earlier, it is that much harder to get up to see this spectacular view. It's probably more common to see the sunrise if you haven't gone to bed by the time it comes.

Regattas especially the Governor's Cup, bring thousands of people and their boats to the shores of St. Mary's College every summer. This view, however, can be seen practically everyday during the year when the sailing team practices.

Campus Wide

Whoever thought that kicking around a little circular bean bag would become so popular. The Hacky Sack has definitely made a name for itself with Generation X. Playing circles could be seen throughout campus whenever the weather was nice.

Swimmers really know how to have fun and work at the same time. After having a completely dry month (alcohol free), these guys swim their hardest at the NCAA Championships at Mary Washington College. You know what they will be doing when they get home.

Running is not something that everyone does for the fun of it. Four SMC students of the Running Club participated in the Maryland State College Cross Country Championships at Westminster College in October.

Students at St. Mary's have a wide array of talents. The King Bennies played several times during the spring, including a show at The Atomic Outpost and Block Rock '98.

Evenings at St. Mary's are beautiful and there is nothing that compare with that fact. Sunsets seen over the water are one of the most spectacular sights one will ever see. It is very common to see townhouse students sitting on the lawn in front of the Admissions building during sunset hours. This is the time of the year when students don't mind walking to class in the dark.

Advertisements

For the second year in a row, the yearbook staff has tried to the best of their ability to include as many people in The Dove as possible. This includes faculty, staff, students, and the people behind those who make St. Mary's the great school that it is ... the parents. In order to do this, parents are offered the chance to tell their graduating sons or daughters just how proud they are of them. This is the second year this has been provided and the number of advertisements has increased considerably. Hopefully, by the time I graduate, the book will be full of quotes, baby pictures, and loving comments for our seniors. Take a minute to scan the next couple of pages to see if you can guess who the babies are without reading the names. Some should be more obvious than others.

Dominique Smells

The sweet smell of amniotic fluid and I knew my firstborn babe would soon be in my arms.

Smell of her baby-hair as I ran my lips softly over her head.

Smell of those diapers as I bragged, 'Breast-fed babies don't stink.'

The smell of solid food and the smell of her diapers as I gagged.

The smell of a sweaty little toddler as we tried to extract her, sleeping, from a backpack.

Musty old sleeping bag and campfire smoke; she didn't even miss us and she was only four.

The smell of blood and dirt on her knee with the smile on her face that said, 'I did it all by myself'.

The smell of flowers in the house that came from (God forbid) a young man.

They came by foot, bike, and car; freshly showered and smelling like a barber shop.

The smell of worry on her father.

The smell of relief as we realized that she considered a date packing a picnic lunch and going to play soccer in the warm rain.

Her car. A world of smells; old french fries, soccer shoes, the smell of the lake in the summer.

Too soon grown; too soon gone; and now I miss the smell of her shampoo in the bathroom.

Another alum
under our roof and
"the beat goes on".

Congratulations Mike.
